Increase in Number of Men at the Post Required Change-General Port News.

The steam launch Col. Hamilton, which has been used as the tender for the officers at the Fort Washington artillery station, has become, it is stated, too small for the increase in the number of officers and men now stationed there, and they are now expecting a much larger boat to take its place. The new boat, it is said, will be me of the tugs of the quartermaster's department, now in service at one of the ermy posts in the south, and will be large enough to carry considerable freight, as well as passengers. She is expected to arrive at the fort within a very short time. The engineer and pilot on the launch Col. Hamilton will, it is understood, be transferred to the new boat.

It is stated that the owners of the little side-wheel steamer Harry Loder, which ran upon a route between Alexandria and Farmington, Md., on Piscataway creek, unboat for the route, and will have her in service before the end of the present month. They are now, it is said, negotiating for a light-draft steamer either at Baltimore or Philadelphia, the deal for which will be closed in a few days. The boat in view is larger than the Loder, and can make better me, and will greatly improve the service in the route. If purchased the boat will given an overhauling and will be pre-ired for the winter's work on the river. > carpenter shop, located in the basement, the floors of the basement were to be of concrete, laid complete by the District. "The only indication," said Mr. Speir in his letter to the Commissioners, "of any kind or character to denote that a wood floor for the carpenter shop was ever thought of is a note on the basement plan. it is a well-known and accepted fact that the specification is the instrument which governs and guides the builder; he obtains his information of what is wanted from the specifications and makes his estimates on what the specifications call for. He cannot estimate on what the specifications do not specify, as there would be no limit to what he might include or what he might say he included if his bid should be hign. There estimate on work, and that is to be governed strictly by what the specifications require. The amount involved, although not small item, is small compared to the ques tion of whether an owner can compel a builder to do work which is not mentioned or called for by his specifications."

Capt. Chester Harding, assistant to the Engineer Commissioner, recommended that the contractor be required to provide the flooring, for the reason that it was specifically called for in writing on the plans and comes within the following specification: "All work indicated in the drawings and not mentioned in the specifications is to be furnished and executed the same as if it was called for by both the drawings and the specifications." Continuing, Capt.

"There can be no doubt that the plans and specifications supplement each other, and together describe the work upon which bids were invited, and prescribe the work to be done under the contract. The contractor is especially cautioned in the specifications to examine the drawings and specifications thoroughly before entering into a contract for the execution of the work and satisfy his mind as to their accuracy and completeness, as he cannot, after signing the contract, avail himself of manifest errors or discrepancies should such exist, nor fail to make plural and per-fect any or all parts not fully expressed for
